Welcome and Presentation of Awards

Elliott Cheu

Associate Dean

Keynote Speaker

David Glickenstein

Associate Head, Mathematics Graduate Program

Professor, Mathematics

David Glickenstein joined the University of Arizona in 2003 after completing a PhD in Mathematics at the University of California at San Diego, having traveled west from his home in Pennsylvania. The exhibit Puzzles, Proofs, and Patterns: Experience the World of Mathematics was conceived by Dr. Glickenstein and developed in collaboration with a number of colleagues at the University of Arizona and the Flandrau Science Center with funding from the National Science Foundation. The exhibit has been featured on the museum floor since 2015. Dr. Glickenstein's research centers on geometry, including theory deforming complicated shapes into more symmetric ones.

He has recently become interested in applications of geometry and other areas of mathematics to data science and data analysis, and is a member of the UA-TRIPODS team that works to connect the disciplines of computer science, math, and statistics to work on fundamental problems in data science. Dr. Glickenstein has supervised many undergraduate student researchers who have gone on to positions at graduate schools, industry, and government.

Madison Delmoe

Department of Mathematics

Academic Distinction

Madison is a sophomore pursuing a BS in Mathematics with the comprehensive emphasis. She will be finishing the mathematics requirements for the bachelor's degree this spring and then spending the next two years taking several graduate level math courses in hopes of applying to a PhD program for pure mathematics. Her ultimate goal is to become a research mathematician and professor of mathematics.

Madison originally attended the University of Arizona with the intent of becoming a plastic surgeon, but after being exposed to the introductory proofs course during her second semester, she discovered a passion for creating and proving the language of mathematics. She is currently the treasurer of the undergraduate math club, MathCats, an ambassador for the College of Science, an undergraduate teaching assistant in multivariable calculus, and a member of Dr. Timothy Secomb's lab, where she studies the quantitative aspects of oxygen transport.
